OTOLOGIC

Streptomycin Sulfate and Dihydrostreptomycin Toxicity
Confirmation of the peripheral locus in the labyrinth of toxicity from streptomycin and dihydrostreptomycin, with experimental proof that delayed deafness can occur several weeks to months following administration of dihydrostreptomycin. A beautifully illustrated and conducted study.
T. Manford McGee, M.D., Detroit, and J. Olszewski, M.D., Toronto, Canada	295
The Sensory Cells of the Membranous Labyrinth
Electron microscopy is revealing details of cochlear structure which promise to have physiologic significance in the hearing process.
Salvatore Iurato, M.D., Milan, Italy	312
Reconstruction of Ear Canal in Surgery for Chronic Ear
An interesting new modification of radical mastoid and tympanoplasty surgery.
Tauno Palva, M.D., Tunku, Finland	329

RECONSTRUCTIVE

Tracheal Prostheses
To replace the trachea, a Marlex or stainless steel mesh prosthesis has proved to be satisfactory in dogs for a 1-year period, whereas Mersilene cloth was unsatisfactory.
S. Donald Greenberg, M.D., and Richard K. Willms, M.D., Houston, Texas	335

ENDOSCOPIC

Bronchoscopy Under General Anesthesia
A safe, practical method of administering general anesthesia through an endotracheal tube for the occasional patient unsuited to local anesthesia for bronchoscopy.
